

Journey to the Digital Land: Addressing Diverse Radio Audiences and Markets

22-24 February 2010 | New Delhi, India

SPONSORSHIP

The RadioAsia Conference will be financed primarily from participants' registration fees. However, as it is necessary to pitch these at an affordable cost for delegates from all countries in the Asia-Pacific region, income alone from these fees will be insufficient to cover the costs of organising a major international conference and of providing fellowships to a number of participants from less economically developed countries. To meet these expenses, the organisers invite corporations and other organisations to support and sponsor the various conference activities:

Sponsorship Benefits

Publicity and professional association with the conference

The conference will be promoted to more than 70,000 key players in the media and communications industry through mailers, brochures, and tri-media publicity ensuring wide exposure for sponsors and their identification with what will be promoted as the region's premier radio conference. All publicity brochures, including related websites, will include the names and logos of the sponsors.

Networking with industry leaders and practitioners

During the 3-day conference, sponsors will obtain direct access to industry leaders and practitioners. Such networking can generate valuable contacts and business deals during and after the event.

Networking with conference speakers

More than 40 speakers from the radio industry and academia are scheduled to share their views and insights on the conference topics. Their presence will be valuable to sponsors who wish to interact with them.

Distribution of information on your organisation's activities, services or products

For the principal sponsor and four major sponsors, the conference kits will include information provided by sponsoring organisations. In addition, all sponsors may place publicity material on a table to be provided at the entrance to the conference venue.

Strengthening your organisation's profile

Through the conference, your organisation can be projected as an industry leader committed to activities that benefit the radio industry and promote development in the region.
